Dollar Wheat.

For the first time in many years wheat has been selling for one dollar per bushel in Christian county, and at a time too when most of it is in the hands of the growers. It is a God send to our farmers, for if there ever was a time when they needed a "lift" it is now. For the past three years it has seemed that Dame Fortune had a chronic frown for them, dark and relentless, but her face has cleared now and she is smiling once more. It is not the purpose of this article to enter into the causes that brought this about, nor to rejoice over the misfortunes of other nations that have worked for the good of this one, but to venture a word of warning to our farmers, myself among the number; those of us who have held our wheat and reaped the benefit of the advance in price are apt to congratulate ourselves on our wise foresight and be encouraged to hold again next year and do the same thing over again, and those who sold at about sixty cents when the market opened (a price at which we can all well afford to raise wheat) are disposed to "kick themselves" and are figuring out an actual loss of forty cents per bushel, which might as well have been made, and have determined to hold their wheat next year. The advance in price just at this time, while preparation is making for planting, will stimulate to a larger sowing than usual in all of the winter wheat growing sections. The storing of this crop, should it make a good yield, will require double the storage capacity of the county or vicinity. This storage will have to be provided by the farmers themselves at a heavy expense. Now the suggestions I wish to make are these:

First, don't permit yourselves to be drawn into sowing a larger crop this year than you could afford to lose in case of a failure in yield, and

Second, don't use up all of the profits you have made on the crop being marketed now in building granaries, that may be or may not be a benefit to you. Let's try and hold on to this quarter of a million dollars and use it for our present relief as far
